

Sending International Wires to AdelFi

Overview

To send an International Wire, funds must be routed to a U.S. Bank that is connected to an international payment system, such as the SWIFT System.

In most cases, the sending international bank already has a relationship with a U.S. correspondent bank that also has a SWIFT Code. AdelFi is not connected to the SWIFT System and does not have a SWIFT Code.

Provide the following information to the sending bank.

Please ensure that you include all the following information on your wire request:

1. Beneficiary Name	This is the name on the AdelFi account to which you want to send the funds
2. Beneficiary Account Number	This must be a valid AdelFi account number
3. Beneficiary Bank Name	Please use “AdelFi”
4. Beneficiary Bank Identifier	Please use AdelFi’s routing number 322273379

When sending international wires to the credit union, the best practice is for the international originating bank to send the wire through its own U.S. Dollar correspondent. A correspondent bank, also called an intermediary bank, is a bank with which another bank has a relationship to send and receive U.S. Dollars (USD). If the international bank has a USD correspondent, the information above is sufficient for them to route a wire to the U.S., which can then be forwarded to AdelFi.

My sending bank is asking for a SWIFT code.

For the credit union to receive an international wire, it must first be sent to a SWIFT-connected U.S. bank, which can then forward the wire to AdelFi via the Federal Reserve system.

For example, if you are sending a wire from a bank in Thailand to AdelFi, the funds will go from the Thai bank to a SWIFT-connected U.S. bank (ex. Chase, Citibank, etc.) and then to AdelFi. (Sometimes, the international bank may send the wire to an international correspondent bank before it is forwarded to a SWIFT-connected U.S. bank.)

Note: If you search the Internet for an AdelFi SWIFT Code, you will find one that reads “ECCUUS61.” This SWIFT/BIC Code cannot be used for wire transfers because the credit union is not connected to the SWIFT system.

The international bank will not choose a U.S. Bank for me... now what?

On the rare occasion the international bank will not select a SWIFT-connected U.S. bank for you, an alternative option is to send funds to us through Convera (formerly Western Union Business Solutions). Please note that this is not the preferred method. Sending to Convera adds additional parties to the wire transfer, which increases the likelihood of complications.
